DETAILED ACTION

Claims 1-23 are pending and have been examined.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

2. Claims 1-23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention. The independent claims recite a “source code” instruction to access memory whether “permanent” or a “memory file”. The specification uses C/C++ as an example of a high-level programming language of source code instructions. One of ordinary skill in the art would not be enabled to use high-level instructions (C/C++) to manipulate low-level memory operations. High-level instructions do not manipulate low-level memory operations as claimed. Memory management is controlled, for example, by the operating system. Cache management may even be performed in hardware. Further, the specification make use of “fopen” as an example of a presumable memory instruction, however the argument format of the example

“fopen” (page 8, line 12) is unknown. Therefore, the independent claims are rejected for failing to be enabling. The dependent claims do not correct the situation. Correction may involve elaboration as to the claimed “instruction” or the claimed “permanent file” or “memory file” in relation to the claimed high-level source code.

Response to Arguments

2. Applicant's arguments filed 06 March 2006 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant argues the claimed invention is enabled by the specification. Applicant states the specification (page 9, line 15 to page 10, line 28) and figures (3A) provide a detailed description of the process of using a memory file. Yet this quotation provides no indication of the required claim language “source code”. Further, Applicant asserts “fopen” is a basic function of C/C++, which is correct. However, Applicant then asserts the argument format with a parameter “type=memory” would be easily determined by one of ordinary skill in the art. This is untrue and unsupported by any factual evidence or reasoning on Applicant's part. Referring to Atkinson (page 68, under “Opening the File”) “fopen” does not contain a parameter “type=memory” as Applicant contends. Applicant's specification does not enable the use of this apparently new command/instruction or parameter. Thus, the rejection is maintained.

3. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure:

"stdio.h"; The Single UNIX Specification, Version 2; The Open Group; 1997; pp. 1-4.

Atkinson et al.; "Using C", QUE Corporation ; 1990; pp. 66-70.

Conclusion

4. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
